THE plucky woman, who in San Francisco pursued and collared a burglar, and on the open street held him until the tardy police relieved her, has set a fine example to other women. A little pluck and self-possession are of high value in the case of a burglar being discovered in one's house. Certainly the coolness of the San Francisco woman and her resolution not to be robbed were more than a match for the cunning and strength of the burglar. A New York woman this week has quite rivaled the San Francisco wife. While the latter caught and held her robber, the former, finding a her robber, the former, finding a Martin Sullivan, Superintendent of Rocky Run Ice Company, was in town a revolver's cold muzzle pressed to her temple and backed up by the demand to hand over her money, sprang upon the man, who was twice her size, and shouting for help, attempted to detain him. The rascal, frightened by her attack, put up his pistol and fled, pursued through the streets by the courageous woman. These examples ought to encourage women to fear burglars and robbers less, and fight them more. The average burglar does not like a noise and a difficulty; he is averse to assaulting a woman, and takes life only in rare cases. Discovered, he will, seven times out of ten, flee-in short, he relies for success mainly upon his victim's fears, and the chance that the householder, if disturbed, will not resist him, but submit to be shorn of his goods.

GENOA Courier: R. H. Chapman of the Topographic Survey, who recently completed the work in his division south of Genoa, has been assigned a portion of the division immediately north of here, and the past week made his camp near the McTarnahan bridge. Mr. Chapman saye he noted some fifteen reservoir sites in the Carson Valley watershed, but as it is not his business to locate reservoirs, he did not investigate the feasibility of bringing water into them, The topographic survey should have been made a year in advance of the storage reservoir survey made by Col. Bridges, as the former is calculated to assist the latter. In speaking of the comparative configuration of different localities, Mr. Chapman said the mountains in this region are remarkable for their flat summits and steep sides. The whole range of Sierras have such broad summits that great difficulty is experienced in finding the direction, He dwelt at some length upon the necessity of improving springs throughout the mountains. Stock are permitted to tramp the spring up and check the flow, whereas, in many instances, the water might be conducted to fertile land and utilized for irrigating purposes.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Man Has His Arm

Last evening as the V. & T. Fair special was pulling out from the depot, many passengers, who had stood by and heard the long whistles and the Conductor's repeated calls of "all aboard" without stirring a step, at the last moment made a rush for the moving train, fairly tumbling over each other in their efforts to get on board. Quite a number were thrown to the ground, and one Ed. Shannagan from Virginia City fell in such a position that his left arm was caught by a car wheel and was so badly crushed that amputation was found to be necessary. At the time of the accident the injured man is said to have been somewhat intoxicated.

REMEMBER! YOU CANNOT

BETTER DONE BY SENDING

LARGE HOUSEHOLDS. dvantages of Life in Families Made Up of Many Members.

There is no cheerfulness in the world com-parable to that afforded by the daily life of s large family, says Harper's Bazar. There may be an equal amount of happiness in a small family, there may be a depth of bliss where only two are together of which the life lived by ten or a dozen could afford no idea; but for the cheer of varied interests, of lively voices, of going and coming, of song and laughter, of moving figures, of the sense of action and life, what can be desired better than a family where father and mother and grandmother, aunts and chil-dren, make the round dozen? In a small family it is difficult to keep up the wide in-terest in people and neighborhood which does a great deal to promote cheerfulness; ti is difficult to keep up such interest in more than a very few, from the mere want of time, from the difficulty of getting about, and the impossibility of being in more than one place at a time, if from no other reason. But where there are a num-ber of people under the roof, that answers every purpose, as each one bringing in keen feeling for the affairs of several others, the whole together maintain a wide and deep connection from which cheerfulness is precipitated like a salt from its component But, spart from the cheer derived from intercourse and relationship with the outside multitude by means of a large family's varied acquaintance, comes that derived from other sources in consequence of our full circle. This member of the large household is the one devoted to charity; all the rest do a great deal of vicarious charity, as we may call it, through that channel, and feel content with satisfied consciences in a sense of duty done, which sense, whether it contributes to virtue or not, does, at any rate, to cheerfulness, and it is cheerfulness of which we are speaking. This other mem-ber is the student of science, and out of the chance conversation, the books, plates, ex-periments and experiences of this in-dividual, the rest hive a sufficient amount of scientific honey for their own uses, and are enriched with learning without the least exertion of their own, receiving it, as it were, through the pores. These others, again, do the gay society business; and those of the remainder who are quietly inclined go to all the routs and drives and sails in the gay one's enjoyment, see what the belles wear and how the beaux behave, and never have to leave their tranquil corand never have to leave their tranquit cor-ner at all. And this last one, with scraps of singing and scraps of piano-playing, and mornings of practicing and evenings of mirth, welds every thing together in a sort of perpetual ringing of joy-bells. In short, in a large family the whole world comes to every member of it, and in a small family only a narrow segment of it can come.

THE CRANK DISCOURAGER. A Railroad Official Who Deals Principally in Gentle Sarcasm.

"Bothered by cranks and inventors," repeated the railroad man; "well, I should smile! They will average three per week the whole year round, and their inventions outnumber the stars."

"The man with the car-coupler turns up pretty often, I suppose?" queried a New York Sun scribe. "Twice a week on the average, but I've known six of them to be in this office at

"Do you make a test of every invention? "Nearly every one. That's what I am here for. The correct title of my position is, 'The Railroad Invention Tester and Crank Discourager!' When a chap comes along with a patent car coupler I always take him down into the yards and give his patent a

"And you hit a good thing now and then, do you not?"

"Never. The car coupler of thirty years ago is the best in use, and indeed about the only one. You can get nothing better. However, you have got to prove an invention worthless before you can choke off the inventor. If there is any cost to attach it to a car he pays for it. I had one here last week with a patent freight-car coupler which was to be worked by a lever, thus rendering it unnecessary for the brakeman to place himself been the bumpers. I saw half a dozen defects, but he was enthusias tic, and so I had it put on to a couple of cars. We went out into the yards, hitched to a suitable engine, and made a trial. The brake failed to work, and the inventor stepped in to toggle at it, and he was caught between the bumpers and smashed so flat that he covered a whole door. He was No. 36, I believe."

"Thirty-six what?" "Victims since January 1. I keep a memorandum of them. Most of 'em were killed outright, but some went frome to die. It is all done by their own inventions, and we can not be held responsible. I keep an old door and four yard men handy to carry off the bedy and take? the body, and that's all they can reasonably expect. Ah! but here comes a man with a patent draw bar. If you can come around about day after to-morrow I'll be ready to try it, and it's ten to one you'll see him carried off. Had six draw-bar men here last month, and five of 'em were shipped home by the undertaker."

TO CURE DRUNKENNESS. The Cause of the Craving for Liquor and How to Overcome It.

A correspondent writes to the New York Sun as follows: "You published a letter of an anonymous correspondent asking: 'Can any one give me a cure for drunkenness?' I will, in the same way, give your correspondent a cure through you, if you will publish it.

"Indulgence in spirits after awhile—which is longer or shorter, according to the con-stitution of the person—produces irritation, inflammation and fever of the stomach, hence the craving for drink; and the greater the fever the greater the craving. As spirits act also on the nervous system it be comes impaired and the brain weakened.
Who can deny that a person ailing in these several ways is laboring under a serious disease! He has then no will-power to exercise, because the seat of the will is in the nervous centers, and when these are impaired or destroyed so also is the will power.

"Here is the cure: Let the person have within his reach a small vial of the best kind of tincture of Peruvian bark, and when the craving for liquor comes on him let him take a teaspoonful of the tincture every two hours. In a few days the taste for liquor is destroyed, and destroyed while indulging it, for tincture of Peruvian bark is spirits into which has been drawn all the substance of Peruvian bark. It is to be found in every days store, but it should be found in every drug store, but it should be of the very best.

"Peruvian bark is a tonic. It is also the "Peruvian bark is a tonic. It is also the best, if not the only cure known for fever. It is from Peruvian bark that quinine is extracted, and, moreover, it is anti-periodic. It is by these three agencies that it destroys the craving for liquor. Any one wishing to be cured of that aliment can be in the way I have described, but there are few drunkards, indeed, who wish to be cured."

Herr Spithoever's Mistake.

It was at the shop of Herr Spithoever, the erudite bibliophile, in the Eternal City. A pretty American traveler wanted a copy of Max O'Rell's book on the United States, and said so. The Herr bibliophile glowered through his spectacles a moment, and replied with noble scorn: "Gott im Himmel, meee! Maxous Aurelius yos neffer in der United Shtates."
